The sufferers, no doubt nothing ing to Shanghai. With Li Hung-ohang and loth to have a pretext, retaliated by plundering the city. The telegraph was set in motion at once, and troops were soon sent, by to direct the operations in what appears now to junk, and the crew were oblived to heave to, whose aid the rioters were dispersed. But mischief has evidently been done. The people of Chekiang are well known for their Encyclopædia of Matouan lin that in the on Lan Tao. The pirates tarried off their junk independent spirit, and there are many pirates on the coast even now. Huang Kingman, the noted pirate chief, who has thus far eluded all efforts of the Imperial troops to capture him, is said to be connected with these rioters, and if this be correct, it is probable more will be heard of them. The White Lotus Conspiracy at Wuchang was a serious matter, and if the conspirators should succeed in raising the standard of revolt, it requires no prophet to see that they would be speedily joined by disaffected in other provinces. The Chinese Government should be careful not to allow the mandarins to rush into excess when suppressing a rebellion. It was necessary to put down the riot at Wu, but it was a grievous excess of duty for the mandarins to proceed to a war of extermination with the friends of the culprits. In the leak. One pump was found sufficient to keep the event of China engaging in a foreign war it would not surprise us to see a formidable when it was found that she had lost one of the opposed to the cession of their territory to insurrection break out against the Manchu power, and such acts as those recorded in Chekiang must necessarily tend to keep alive the seeds of disaffection industriously sown by the secret political societies.

to the above lot and that a Crown Lease may be obtained for hine bundred and ninety nine years on payment of twelve thousand five hundred dollars and an annual rental of one hundred and twenty six deliars eighty seven conts, we find that when the government gave the ground to the Original Ico Association of Hongkong it was on condition that a supply of ice for hos-pital purposes would always be forthcoming, which condition has been faithfully observed, and the supply now both cheaper and more certain. The building in its present state is unsuited for any other purpose than that of an Ire House of Dopot, being so domp that articles deposited therein are quickly destroyed. them down This dampness is caused by the foundation of the building being below the level of Ice House Street, howant of ventilation, and moisture penetrates the brick wall protecting the hillside of the premises. Owing to their nucertain tenure, the Ice Company have hitherto refrained from altering the building in any way, but now that the Government propose charge a heavy premium for the ground and a substantial annual rental, it will be imperative upon the Company to make such alterations upon the building as to fit it for other purposes than an Ice House only. In order to overcome the inherent defects of the situation, such alterations would be considerable and entail a heavy outley, and it is probable that the Company would require further building ground in

Had a lease been granted when the ground was first built upon, some thirty years ago, but a small premium would have been charged for the ground, and the annual rantal would also have been much smaller than is now asked. In view of the limited accommodation and the auticipated expenditure, and bearing in mind the circumpossessed by the Ico Company, the General Managers think that if the Geverament would be pleased to ac capt eight thousand dollars, payable by five equalannual instalments, for the ground, and limit the yearly rental to minety dollars, they are prepared to ream nend this to the shareholder. Mossra, Jardine, Matheson & Co., General Managers, Ice Company. All the information I had at my disposal. when the meeting was summoned was to the effect that this ground was originally granted by the Government to the Ice Association of Hougkong, that some sort of building had been erected by that Association, which was repaired and improved by the Tudor IceCo., to whom the ground had passed, and that a good deal more had been done to it by Messrs. Kyle and Bain, and finally it passed into the hands of the present Company, who had acquired the rights of the original proprietors, as regards the building at all events -by lapse of time, if by nothing else; at any rate, there was no one else entitled to claim it I was therefore prepared to recommend that we should accept the terms offered by the Governoff without help, the Ichang was retained for a ment. ## EXTRACTS.

KYRILLE. A rose in her hand, a rose in her breast, A rose for her pillow her cheek has pressed, The sun must shine though the rose is shed, And I must live though she is dead.

The nightingale sings on as loud Although they wind her in her shroud; The garden stays where the flowers have fled, And I must live though she is dead. Each month had seemed a summer weather Could we have braved each month together; But Winter's come while the rose is red, And I must live though she is dead.

We wowed that none should part us ever-Ah God, the foolish, poor endeavour! She could not stay though and were wed, And I must live though she is dead. MAT: PROBYM.

THE SECRET OF GUSTAV PORE'S

It would seem that poor Doré really died of a broken heart. In the closing year of his life he had become a morose being, fleeing his sincerest friends, seeing enemieseverywhere, and quarrelling about a trifle with the very people who esteemed him most. cause of this was disappointed ambition. He desired to be thought of as a great painter; the critics only praised him as an illustrator of books, and their praise, instead of consoling him, wounded him to the very quick. "Those book illustrations," he said to an old friend, "are the reasons why my right to paint great pictures is challenged; had I my life to live over again, I would imprisoned in one cell of art, and woo be unto him if he try to escape from his allotted about me; those qualified praises wound me to my heart's core."

On the 17th the battles round Metz began, and Bazaine's armies, everywhere outnumbered and beaten, had to retreat before the German hosts. But St. Privat and Gravelotte were reported to the Parisians as victories, and it was said that Bazaine had thrown himself into Metz in order to take up a "strong position"! The Empress believed in all these fables. Was it a wonder that she should do so when clubs like the Union and the Cercle Imperial, old generals would bark furiously at you you expressed any doubt as to Marshal Canrobert's having driven a whole regiment of Prussian cuirassiers into the sand-pits of Jaumont-sand-nits which had no existence? The truth is, double sets of telegrams used to be sent from the seat of war, and those which related events with some approach to the truth (for none of them were wholly illustrations a fairer measure of justice truthful) were never communicated to the Empress. When the hoazing dispatch about the world decrees that each artist shall be the Jaumont sand-pits was put into her victory, was so overjoyed that she ran down from her apartments to the guard-room right critic, he also said:—"I have only one favour among the soldiers, who were lying upon to ask of you; it is this: So long as you can- camp-bods or playing cards, and waved the not, without reserve, praise, say nothing beaten?"
